WELCOME TO BALTIC PRIDE 2013 IN VILNIUS

A message from the organisers

July 2013 marks the 20th anniversary of decriminalisation of homosexuality in Lithuania. Since then the LGBT movement has made significant steps towards equality. The first LGBT organization Lithuanian Gay League was registered in 1995. Accession to the EU in 2004 saw the introduction of important anti-discrimination legislation. In 2009, Baltic Pride was established, with the three Baltic capitals taking turns to host the event. After years of LGBT people being denied their freedom of assembly, the first Pride in Lithuania was held in 2010.

There is of course still much to be achieved. Recent surveys have shown that homophobia, biphobia and transphobia continue to be a serious concern in our society. LGBT people are afraid to be open about their sexual orientation and gender identity. Proposals for homophobic amendments to the law are being introduced in parliament.

Now we celebrate the second Pride in Lithuania, bringing together the LGBT community, activists and allies from the Baltic countries and the wider European community. It is a time to look back: the exhibition From Dusk till Dawn will present the 20-year history and achievements of the LGBT movement in Lithuania. It is also a time to look to the future: the international human rights conference will gather experts and activists to discuss a roadmap for LGBT equality. We want Baltic Pride to look as diverse as its participants, with events ranging from poetry readings and zine workshops to a film festival and discussions on human rights, all culminating in Saturday's March for Equality.

We warmly invite you to Vilnius and Baltic Pride to participate, discuss, be inspired and take an important step towards equality and diversity.

On behalf of Baltic Pride organisers,
Vladimir Simonko,
Lithuanian Gay League Board Chair

GREETINGS FROM AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL DENMARK

Amnesty International supports Baltic Pride because it is about fundamental rights like freedom of expression and assembly. A Pride parade is an important manifestation of the freedom of assembly and gives the kind of visibility that can help in creating change and tolerance in a society. Furthermore Amnesty is marching in solidarity with LGBTI people from the Baltic countries to demand equality. Amnesty participates in 2013 with 40 activists from all over Europe.

I Am the Other

photography exhibition by Remigijus Venckus

A collection of nude photos created between 2007 and 2013, where the artist invites to meet the male body as the Other, who is only hinted at in Lithuanian public discourse. The artist's main and newest photo series I Am the Other explores truths discussed in the Bible. In his other photography series, the artist uses the power of visual art to explore the sexuality and intimacy of the male body.

From Dusk till Dawn - 20 years of LGBT Freedom in Lithuania

"From Dusk till Dawn" is the first exhibition of queer history and culture in Lithuania, showing pivotal moments of LGBT activity and related art projects from 1993 till 2013. The historical documentation (photographs, TV reportages, publications) together with art works reveal the political, social and individual struggle for equal rights and recognition. The exhibition combines anthropological and visual perspectives and invites the viewer to follow an interactive timeline.

The exhibition spaces create a symbolically subversive context. The CAC basement is a reminder of marginal queer places of the 1990s and stands for a metaphor of the closet. Now it is open to everybody willing to explore queer reflections in contemporary Lithuanian art: manifestations of different sexualities, homoerotic passion, censorship, performative bodies, marginalisation, living together.

The Reading Room is a place for active remembering, being together, spending time reading and discussing. Queer narratives spread out from the timeline to the walls, windows, tables and shelves of the library. (De) constructions of historical context happens in the present together with readings of queer poetry. The exhibition is accompanied by a catalogue in English and Lithuanian.

Presentation: Gender Equality Index

The European Institute for Gender Equality (EIGE)'s presentation will focus on presenting the Gender Equality Index, a composite indicator that synthesises the complexity of gender equality into a user-friendly and easily interpretable measure.

The presentation will focus on the Index results and the value it adds to provide an overview of how far or close the EU and its Member States have come towards achieving gender equality.

Subsequently, the session will outline the key messages arising from this first Gender Equality Index as well as highlight the existing data gaps in particular in the domains measuring Violence and Intersecting Inequalities.

From a Strange Vantage Point

Photography exhibition by Virgilijus Šonta (1952–1992)

"Photography helps to make the junction with the world. If we want this junction to be true, not imaginary, we must be able to look at the world with the eyes of a stranger. Then it opens more clearly". Photographs from the series "Flight" (1977-1979) and "School is my home" (1980-1983) reveal the fragility of the human body and the loneliness of mentally disabled children. High and low, inside and outside, private and public are in constant tension in Šonta's photographs from the collection of the Modern Art Center.
